1. Opening and Purpose of the Meeting

Preah Sihamoniraja Buddhist University (PSBU) held a consultative meeting on the report of the international education quality assurance inspection and evaluation conducted by the International Education Quality Assurance Council (IEAC), with participation from representatives of the Accreditation Committee of Cambodia (ACC) and international partners. The meeting was led by H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey, Secretary of State of the Ministry of Cults and Religions in charge of PSBU, together with representatives from IEAC, ACC, EBS Global Solutions, and the university's international development project team. H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey welcomed the delegates and emphasized the importance of the evaluation in strengthening PSBU's educational quality and aligning its academic and institutional practices with international standards.

2. Key Discussion – Report on the IEAC Inspection and Evaluation Process

The meeting focused on the report and outcomes of the IEAC inspection and evaluation process at PSBU. The discussion reviewed the university's overall performance in key areas, including governance and administration, teaching and learning, student welfare, curriculum, quality assurance and continuous improvement, health and safety, and student recruitment. The evaluation also examined PSBU's commitment to community engagement, environmental sustainability, inclusiveness, gender equality, religious harmony, and support for students from disadvantaged backgrounds.

The discussion further recognized the university's efforts to strengthen international cooperation and provide opportunities for international students and academic partnerships.

3. Inspection and Evaluation Report by Dr. Karl Meneghella

Dr. Karl Meneghella presented the IEAC inspection and evaluation report, highlighting the university's strengths and areas for continued development. He noted several positive aspects, including regular institutional reviews and data-informed decision-making, strong commitment from senior leadership, positive attitudes among staff and students, and the active engagement of faculty members. He also highlighted PSBU's commitment to faculty development, investment in human resources, internationalization, inclusiveness, community development, environmental sustainability, student support, and international partnerships. The report further recognized the health post, student accommodation, computer facilities, classrooms, and other university facilities as important strengths supporting the learning environment.

4. Advantages of Preah Sihamoniraja Buddhist University

The evaluation identified significant advantages of PSBU across seven major areas: (1) governance, systems, and administrative operations; (2) environment, health, and safety; (3) teaching and learning; (4) student welfare; (5) academic programs and curriculum; (6) quality assurance and continuous improvement; and (7) marketing and student recruitment. Dr. Steve McKee also observed that students were actively engaged in their studies and able to respond appropriately to academic questions, while faculty members demonstrated a welcoming and supportive attitude. He further noted that the classrooms were suitable for teaching and learning, the computer facilities met international standards, the dormitories were appropriate for students, and the auditorium was of a high standard.

5. Recommendations of the International Education Quality Assurance Council (IEAC)

Dr. Karl Meneghella presented recommendations for further strengthening PSBU's international quality standards in three key areas. First, regarding infrastructure, the university was encouraged to expand recreational facilities and group sports equipment, develop smart classrooms, and provide modern facilities and equipment. Second, regarding internationalization, PSBU was encouraged to expand international alliances and cooperation, further develop partnerships with EBS Global, and strengthen its library resources, journals, and e-books. Third, regarding health and safety, recommendations included improving accessibility and consistency across university buildings, ensuring adequate sanitary facilities, developing plans to upgrade restrooms to international standards, increasing signage in meeting and public areas, and continuing to expand and develop resources at the university health post.

6. Decision Making and Future Actions

Following the inspection and evaluation, PSBU acknowledged the positive findings and recommendations of IEAC and expressed its commitment to using them as a foundation for continuous institutional improvement. The university will work to implement the recommendations, particularly in infrastructure development, international cooperation, library and digital resources, accessibility, health and safety, and student services. PSBU will also continue strengthening its quality assurance system and international partnerships in cooperation with IEAC, ACC, EBS Global Solutions, and other international partners to further align the university with international education standards.

7. Closing

The meeting concluded with H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey expressing his profound appreciation to the International Education Accreditation Council (IEAC), the Accreditation Committee of Cambodia (ACC), and all international partners for their valuable cooperation, support, inspection, and evaluation. He recognized the important contributions of these institutions and partners in providing professional guidance, constructive feedback, and recommendations to support PSBU's continuous improvement. He emphasized that their engagement has helped strengthen the university's quality assurance mechanisms, academic standards, institutional governance, and readiness for international recognition. H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey also encouraged continued collaboration with national and international accreditation bodies and partners to further enhance PSBU's educational quality, research capacity, academic development, and international standing.
