1. Opening and Purpose of the Meeting

H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey warmly welcomed Professor Masato Noda and the accompanying delegation to Preah Sihamoniraja Buddhist University (PSBU). He expressed appreciation for the visit and highlighted its importance in strengthening friendship, mutual understanding, and cooperation between PSBU and Japanese academic and educational institutions. H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey also introduced the university's leadership, major institutional functions, and current development priorities.

2. Overview of PSBU's Vision, Mission, and Institutional Development

H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey presented an overview of PSBU's vision, mission, objectives, historical development, and major achievements. The discussion highlighted the university's commitment to providing quality education, developing human resources, promoting Buddhist values, and contributing to Cambodia's social and national development. Particular attention was given to PSBU's ongoing efforts to strengthen institutional capacity, academic programs, student services, and good governance.

3. PSBU's Contributions to Education and Human Resource Development

The discussion emphasized PSBU's role in expanding educational opportunities for monks, students, and young people, particularly those from disadvantaged backgrounds. H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey explained the university's efforts to provide accessible higher education, develop students' knowledge and skills, and prepare graduates to contribute positively to Cambodian society. The university's educational initiatives were presented as an important contribution to youth empowerment and national human resource development.

4. Healthcare and Humanitarian Support Initiatives

H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey highlighted PSBU's commitment to social welfare and humanitarian support, particularly through healthcare services for monks, students, and communities in need. During the visit, the delegation visited the Samdech Preah Raj Guru Bour Kry Health Post of His Majesty King Sihamoni, where the role of the health facility and its contribution to supporting the university community and disadvantaged people were introduced. The discussion recognized the importance of integrating education with healthcare and humanitarian services.

5. Institutional Facilities and Student Support Services

The delegation toured several key facilities of PSBU, including the One-Stop Service Center, Techo Santepheap Library, Techo Santepheap Dormitory, health facilities, and other areas of the university. The visits provided an opportunity to observe PSBU's efforts to create a supportive academic environment and improve services for students and monks. Particular attention was given to access to learning resources, accommodation, administrative services, and other facilities that contribute to student well-being and academic success.

6. International Cooperation and Collaboration with Japanese Institutions

Both sides discussed existing and potential cooperation between PSBU and Japanese universities, educational organizations, and other relevant institutions. The role of the Embassy of Japan in Cambodia in facilitating educational and institutional connections was also acknowledged. The discussion explored opportunities for academic exchange, joint educational activities, capacity building, research collaboration, knowledge sharing, scholarships, and other forms of cooperation that could benefit PSBU students, faculty members, and the wider Cambodian education sector.

7. Cooperation in Support of Sustainable Development and Future Initiatives

The meeting emphasized the importance of international partnerships in supporting Cambodia's development priorities and contributing to the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Both sides expressed interest in developing cooperation in education, humanitarian activities, youth development, social support, and other areas aligned with sustainable development. Professor Masato Noda expressed his appreciation and admiration for PSBU's achievements and leadership and conveyed his willingness to contribute to future educational and humanitarian initiatives in cooperation with the university.

8. Decision Making and Future Action

Both sides agreed on the importance of maintaining communication and identifying practical areas for future cooperation between PSBU and Japanese academic and educational institutions. Future initiatives may include academic and student exchanges, educational development programs, capacity-building activities, humanitarian projects, research collaboration, and international partnership opportunities. PSBU and its Japanese partners will continue exploring suitable mechanisms for translating the shared interests discussed during the visit into concrete collaborative activities.

9. Closing Remarks and Commitment to Continuous Improvement

The visit concluded in a warm and cordial atmosphere, with H.E. Nguon Sdechpheakdey, Professor Masato Noda, and PSBU leadership expressing their shared commitment to strengthening friendship, mutual understanding, and long-term cooperation. Both sides reaffirmed their hope that the relationship would generate meaningful opportunities for Cambodian youth and contribute to educational and humanitarian development. The meeting concluded with a handshake and commemorative group photograph, symbolizing mutual respect, friendship, and a shared commitment to continued collaboration.
